

Idea Behind Python Script

I separate distance and coordinates of the known points as dist and coordinate. Then I compute the most possible point based on known coordinates and distance. Even if the distances computed for each station do not match perfectly, this method finds the coordinates that minimize the error function and returns the most optimal solution possible.